To Whom it May Concern,

I think it is extremely important to create legislation for the depositing of information, both for future generations and historians as well as to create a record for more modern users. Things go missing from the internet everyday and, especially in the current world climate, sometimes they go missing under conspicuous circumstances. There should be rules in place to make a digital record, as comprehensive as possible, both for future generations and the current one.

Thank you.

Molly